map of the Juterbog troop training grounds. The quarters shown in quadrant 65-66 of the map are occupied. All the corrugated iron barracks in the old camp (antes Lager) are empty. There are about three regiments in the old camp at present, quartered in the stone barracks. All the troops that were unloaded detrained with their arms and equipment near the Tiefenbrunn railway station. An additional siding has been built at Tiefenbrunn leading to the troop training grounds, so that it is now possible to unload three trains at once.

10. There are about 120 tanks at the old camp. They went off towards Potsdam during the uprising but returned about the middle of July and none has been observed to leave since.

3. The tank and artillery ammunition dump is located north of the switch siding, in the forest. There is also a large wood and building-material depot near by. The location of the dump is indicated by the black rectangle on the map. There is another ammunition dump near the railway line, not far from Jüterbog railway station, but its precise location has not been determined.

4. The workshops (Werkstätten) for vehicle and weapons repairs are in the north part of the city. [REDACTED]
